

Foreword

This issue of Volume 11 of the U.C.D. Law Review represents our first publication of a general law review. In its prior decade, the Law Review has limited itself to publishing an annual symposium volume, containing only student comments. This year we have taken this small first step toward expanding the subject matter of the review. We have also departed from tradition by including non-student written articles. We hope that practitioners and students of law will find the articles interesting and informative.

Deena G. Peterson
Editor-in-Chief

